“For migrants, gender is perhaps the most important single factor shaping their experience – more important than their country of origin, country of destination, their age, race or culture”

IOM factsheet
Migration affects migrant women and men in a different way.

Existing migration-related policies often put women at a disadvantage.

There is a need for gender-sensitive immigration and integration policies and strategies at national and EU level.

Nusha Yonkova
The ENoMW acknowledges the links between poverty, migration and prostitution, which are rooted in global economic inequalities and in gender stereotypes.

The ENoMW considers sex trafficking and prostitution as forms of violence against women.
Time to be brave!
